Re:Radon Measurement: 2.6 PicoCuries per Liter

Dear Mr. Coduto:

The report of the canister you returned to us for analysis represents the concentration of Radon 222 in the air only at the time of sampling. This is a screening measurement only and state and federal agencies recommend that you should not initiate costly changes or repairs based on this report alone. This report is confidential and will not be released or disseminated to a third party without your written authorization.

The results of your test are below the EPA guideline for further action. Please see page 10 of the booklet which came with your test kit for further information

The following actions are recommended by the EPA based upon the measurement reported above. This information also appears on page II of A Citizens Guide to Radon published by the EPA; a reprint of which was sent to you in the original kit.

In most cases, one screening measurement is not a reliable measure of the average radon level to which you and you family are exposed. Since Radon levels can vary from season to season as well as from room to room, a single screening measurement only serves to indicate the potential for a Radon problem.

Depending upon the result of your screening measurement you may need follow-up measurements to provide you with accurate assessment of the Radon levels in your home. We have enclosed order cards should you wish to proceed with multiple location testing or with testing several times a year as recommended by the EPA.

NRTC provides a subscription service that enables you to order kits sent to you for quarterly, semiannual or annual testing. Please call 1-800-321-5100 to place your order.

You may call the EPA office for your area or the State office managing Radon Projects for information or further assistance.

Very truly yours,
